HOURS FROM A CONVENT

Purchase at: House of James or www.emilyisaacsoninstitute.com

Author: Emily Isaacson

Release Date: May 2, 2013

This book of hours takes us into the mystic divine through the eyes of a nun in a convent. Written about the Poor Clare nuns, it tells the story of the Madonna of the streets and her message to our time: it composes the sacred moments of convent prayer, to the evening's beauty of an orchard grove, to the far reaches of Africa. This book of prose-poetry expresses the journey into God, day by day, hour by hour, minute by minute with depth in a search for truth and authenticity. Emily Isaacson's poetic voice captures the beauty of the seasons, that of nature, and the sorrow of a suffering world. She is a prophetic witness, sensitive to the times and seasons of the spiritual earth. Her postmodern poetry, in search of art and its inspiration, is conformed to obedience to the gift. Both disciplined and profound, it measures light in form and verse, while pouring out the fine oil of the prophetic.
