

Bradley Wilkinson

Senior Consultant

President, skilled speaker, facilitator, and instructional designer, Brad gets his energy from people's development. He describes his focus as helping organizations leverage diversity through creating and maintaining inclusive, high-performance cultures. And he brings over 25 years of hands-on experience designing and delivering high impact adult learning experiences.

Brad is skilled in using a variety of learning delivery methodologies, including experiential workshop design, facilitated group process, action learning, web-based, media-based & virtual learning environments. He has extensive experience facilitating focus groups with audiences ranging from senior Wall Street executives to manufacturing plant associates. Brad also enjoys designing and facilitating group/team retreats, and off-site meetings & is certified in Herrmann Brain Dominance, Intercultural Development Inventory, Myers Briggs Type Indicator & DiSC assessment instruments. A few of the organization's he's presented engaging sessions for include: CapitalOne, Southern Company, Macy's, SunTrust, UPS, Coca-Cola, Cox Communications, Alston & Bird, Alabama Power, American Electric Power, American Association for the Advancement of Science, New Jersey Resources, the American Board of Medical Specialties, Brasfield & Gorrie General Contractors, Scheller College of Business at Georgia Tech, Kenan-Flagler School of Business at the University of North Carolina – Chapel Hill, and The Atlanta Braves.

KEY AREAS OF EXPERTISE INCLUDE:

- Instructional Design
- Interrupting Unconscious Bias
- Training of Trainers
- Facilitation of Awareness and Skill-Based Inclusion Training
- Keynote Speaking
- Diversity and Inclusion Strategy Development
- Cross-Cultural Competency & IDI Inventory Assessment & Debrief
- Focus Group Design, Delivery & Synthesis Reporting

Brad takes his energy for diversity into the Atlanta community serving as a racial justice facilitator for the YWCA's "It's Time to Talk," dialogues on race. He is a founding member of Georgia Equality, a non-profit working to secure equality for Georgia's LGBTQIA citizens and active in the Human Rights Campaign.

Huge Ramblin' Wreck fans, Brad and his husband Fred, live in Atlanta with their four kids.