

Empowered

I am empowered to do good in life. When I'm older I'll have a good job and an apartment or a house. I will be the world's greatest coder and I will make sure of it. I'll be coding many different scripts and I'll do each as good as it has to be and if not as good then I'll be doing better than before. What I have in mind for my future is beyond what most people would have. What I have in mind is, to become the world's best coder that nobody can out-do. The way I see the world is that generations to come will start to get more advanced than the past generations. I'm ready to surpass my own generation. Ready to code different websites that tell people the good of the world. I'm ready to change the internet to make it a better way for people to learn about things while they're online and doing their own thing. I'm gonna do all of this before I say goodbye to this world and I'll make sure it gets out there that the world WILL become a better place. By the time the world becomes a better place I will be another person living in it. I very much so hope my intentions will be the same as they are now. I have many dreams for this world but knowing that only one of them might come true I will make sure that as many as possible will become true. This world needs more positivity and less negativity. More people should do better than they are. As for the homeless they will stop doing drugs and come to their senses, they'll get jobs and then get apartments. They'll start doing better than they are now. People will have new ideas and dreams to achieve and they will achieve those ideas and dreams because I will set something ideal for them to realise that all they have to do is get up and do it instead of moping around like little kids. People will learn the value of life through different things and if they choose some of the internet to learn from then I'll make different websites for people to learn from if those who choose the internet are really trying to learn. With coding I'll empower the people of the world. I will make several websites on several different subjects, so that people will begin to know more. Instead of allowing people of this world to keep guessing, I'll make sure they know more than what schools teach them. They'll know how to cook different things, like fried ulu. They'll know what plants are safe for eating and which plants are poisonous along with which plants will badly intoxicate them and possibly kill them, not to mention which plants are for medicinal uses. They'll learn about different animals and what they're known for. Websites were not really made for non-knowledgeable things, they were originally created for learning, teaching, trading, bargaining, and other probable uses, not used for improbable things like posting unmeaningful selfies, posting nasty pictures or disgusting videos. The internet was originally a place for learning. All that stuff is inappropriate, like for social media for instance. Social media was a place to post pictures of your family in your day-to-day life. The first social media was you talking about how your everyday life pretty much goes. It was also a place to make friends around the globe/talk to friends from a distance if you didn't want to leave your social media. This world is filled with empowered people and I want to be able to make people see that. I want them to know what they're capable of. I don't want them to think they're not capable of anything while they're still like a intermediate student or high school student. No, I want them to know that even if they're in a school it doesn't mean they can't be creative. I want the future generations to be different, not like their parents that just grew up on technology. I want the future generations to use that technology to create better things, not get stuck in it and become a replay of their parents generations and become stuck and not do much. People need to learn something. They shouldn't be going through school and doing good enough to just get by. Kids should be grateful that they even made it this far, because if they aren't happy about coming this far then they have no idea what's coming for them in the long future. There is many ways to learn things and I'll add more to the web soon. People don't really need a lot of money to do a lot of things. These things will eventually start to lessen over the next generations. I want to be able to stop it from happening too soon. Before I ever start my career, I'll make a lot of websites. When I start my career as a computer technician/programmer I will have at least 3 websites up. These websites will have knowledgeable uses like for people who do research or people who want to study it. People are gonna be able to share these resources and help each other. They'll learn a lot within days or hours or weeks of reading and be able to know, understand and do things better. People will start to understand things differently. There's many things to do all the time, and not many people know either where to look or find and how to get started. There's not much to not do in life so there should be no reason for them to not do anything. Not only that but life is filled with lessons and those lessons have to be learnt whether taught by a human, animal or just life itself. These lessons are meant to be learned and nobody can stop that. There's ways to do certain things and sometimes there isn't a way to do things. There is only one way to know/learn and that is to try to go further into understandment. The way I will help these people around the world who don't understand most things clearly is by coding websites. Different coding is used for different things so I'll have to learn many different ones. This is what I'm trying to empower. Change is what is needed for the better of the world. These things are done for a reason and once they are done they're not able to be undone either easily or at all. Sometimes empowerment is hard to find and not completely easy to grasp. Those who've gotten or grasped empowerment are meant to hold on to it as long as they can and pass it on to others before they leave this world. The citizens of this world aren't taught to give, hold on to, and pass on empowerment to the younger or rather younger generation(s). Usually people that teach empowerment are the elderly and older generations to those younger than them. The people who've carried the hope of empowerment are the elderly and they've passed it on a best as possible before they move on from this world. These elders are the respected ones that have been around for years and have spread as much of empowerment as they could and when they passed. They're never forgotten by those whom loved them as those who were very close. This is what empowerment is and this is how it's done.

Empowered

Empowered

Empowered