

ABOUT MANAGING A DIVERSE CLASSROOM ... WITH STYLE, INCLUSION & DIGNITY

The Tipping Point: This seminar was created to increase continuous awareness on productivity improvement that concentrates on retention, diversity and inclusion challenges facing even the most seasoned educators. Instructors and administrators who took this seminar from a wide-array of colleges and universities at the FAPSC conference surveyed, gave this break-out session an affective 4.95% rating on content excellence and attainable potential.

Proven Performance: For continuing education units, this seminar also suffices in meeting the criteria for the annual required professional development of faculty/instructors, administrators and executive academic staff. All training materials, meals and certificate included.

A 4-hour Presentation: This is an extremely interactive, insightful and effective program, and is taught by a university faculty, former associate dean, lead faculty, curricula/coursework developer, international academic advisor, and who held the highest percentage of students in retention and leadership; as Human Resources Management and Leadership instructor, had the highest record of majors placed in their fields of HRM upon graduation.
