INTRODUCTION

The telecommunication industry is a rapidly changing. There are new services, new technologies and decisions to be made based on a different set of facts around every corner.

Just when you think you have found your way to the perfect telecom solution for your company, there is a new option to consider.

The ever changing world of telecommunication has created a great need for telecom consultants.

What services can a telecommunications consulting company offer your company?

HERE ARE 4 OF THE CORE SERVICES:

Telecom Technology Review

Technology and technological capabilities change so quickly that it's sometimes difficult to keep up! Enlisting a telecommunications consultant to perform a technology review will help your company make sense of the most current options.

The newest technologies have the potential upside of performing better or faster, but is there a downside? A telecommunications consultant can provide insight on services such as VoIP, Call Center Solutions and Virtual Hosted PBX.

The technology needs of your company are unique, so the right solution for you may not be the same as the solution for someone else. Enlisting RN Consulting, a telecommunications expert to review your current technology, your immediate needs and needs moving forward will lead you to the best telecom technology choices for your company.

Telecom Expense Management

Many companies think of a telecommunications consultant as someone who can guide their company's telecom needs through changing times.

Expense Management is an ongoing process because service providers offer promotional pricing, new services and new technologies on an ongoing basis. Hiring a telecommunications consultant to oversee your ongoing telecom expenses will assure you that your company continues to get the best pricing through the industries changing rules, services and prices.

As you can see, there are many benefits of hiring a telecommunications consulting firm. Whether your company needs a fact finding mission with an audit, an expert negotiator through a contract procurement or renewal, leadership through changing times, or ongoing management to keep the telecommunications ship on course, a telecommunications consultant can be of great value to your company.

In many cases, the cost of hiring an industry expert will be redeemed in the cost savings of your telecom services in the long run. Whatever the unique and changing telecom needs of your company, enlisting the services of a telecommunications consultant will ensure that you are paying the best prices for the most beneficial telecom services

Project Management

As your company grows by adding a new division, merges with another company or splits into two separate companies, this can lead to confusion regarding telecom services.

When big changes like these are made, your company will likely need a telecommunications consultant to manage the telecom needs of the company. The expert can also offer project management when your company is building an inventory of circuits and lines, considering a new vendor, developing a system to track the wireless devices of your company, or considering migrating part of your technology services to the cloud.

A telecommunications consultant will help guide you through the decision making process during projects and changing times, so that your companies telecom needs don't get lost in the process.

Telecom Contract Negotiation

Your telecommunications consultant can help you negotiate your next telecom services contract.

Securing the best contract is not an easy task, as industry terminology, tariffs, pricing schedules and service guides are confusing to most people who are not in the telecom industry.

Having an expert on your team who is fluent in the language of telecommunications is critical. Working on your behalf, your telecommunications consultant will give your company the competitive edge, and will help your company secure the best contract terms for the best price.
