

Exam 2

In the many health care systems for people with multiple or costly health issues could have services denied or delayed, unnecessary, or "oblivious" high cost treatments. Those with alternate identities could be easily identified. People of a particular religious preference could be easily identified and discriminated against or eliminated. What if their best access to a health surveillance system such as the one being proposed? Would there be any laws left?

The organization, Men and Women for a Representative Democracy in America, requires that F.R.A.C. does not believe what "related services" or "for other purposes" are, opening the doors wide for corruption. Lastly, although the bill identifies entities that can carry out surveillance measures (school health clinics, nonprofits, faith based organizations and others) the bill fails to specify eligibility criteria, making it easy to hand over testing and tracing contracts to virtually any organization.

The funding for this system needs to be revealed. We believe this surveillance system is unethical and unconstitutional and insist that medical privacy rights be restored. It is only a matter of time before information in such a system will be abused with tragic consequences.

Sincerely,

Member

