Commercial Renovation
McEnally's Mercantile

This 10,000 square foot abandoned building once housed the Piggly Wiggly grocery store in Clay, Alabama. After being left vacant for several years, the building had become worn and vandalized.

The owner wanted to create a store in the town in which she lives that would be an asset to the entire community. The building would be totally renovated, but designed to keep the "General Store" feel in the atmosphere of the building. The walls were designed to add some used pieces of tin to give the feeling she wished to obtain. A "country type" front porch the entire length of the building was added to give a warm and inviting look.

This newly renovated store would stock feed for all types of small and large farm animals. There would be fresh and locally grown vegetables, fresh eggs and honey.

The store also includes hardware and gardening supplies, as well as seasonal items. As you walk inside the store, you get the feeling of going back in time to the "Mercantile Stores of Long Ago".
