Discover Hull at your pace

The best way to explore the city and learn of Hull's heritage in an exciting and interesting way is to walk the routes or trails around it.

Learn about Hull's history and architecture and explore the Old Town with tour guide, Paul Schofield, or just wander around with one of the free maps available from the Tourist Information Centre.

Follow the fishes on The Seven Seas Fish Trail. Starting outside the Tourist Information Centre are 41 unique pavement sculptures of life size representations of all kinds of fish, from a tiny anchovy to a 10ft ray. Obtain a free map and follow the trail through the historic Old Town - great fun for all the family.

Walk along the cobbled High Street in the Old Town, which was once the medieval hub of the city, where quaint old buildings and olde-world pubs have stood for years and four museums bring history back to life in the Museums Quarter. Set around beautiful gardens, the museums offer a fantastic day out for all the family. Also on High Street in Hull is the fine merchant's house, Maister House which was rebuilt in 1743. Owned by the National Trust visitors can view the staircase and entrance hall and see how interiors would have been in buildings during Hull's trading heyday.

The River Hull walkway, which runs behind the buildings on High Street and follows the banks of the river, is where the earliest settlers lived and moored their boats. You can follow the river to the picturesque Marina which houses numerous yachts and small sailing craft. Walk around the Marina to Victoria Pier where the Ferry used to go to the South Bank before the Humber Bridge was built. Corporation Pier opened in 1847 but was renamed Victoria Pier in 1854 after Queen Victoria left from this port following her visit to Hull.

Finally, just a short distance from the Marina and the Museums Quarter, no trip to Hull would be complete without a visit to The Deep. There are thousands of fish and sea creatures on show including spectacular sharks and rays - watch the sharks being fed every day! The Deep's a great place to keep the kids amused for several hours.

Food and Drink

Hull has a wide selection of superb family friendly restaurants and cafés, as well as numerous bars, traditional pubs and exciting nightlife.

Ghostly tales

Like any city, Hull has its own unique attractions and places of historical interest. Here's some you may not know about.

The smallest window in England can be found on the exterior wall of The George Inn on a street called The Land of Green Ginger (named after the medieval spice market that operated here). The story goes that the window, which is adjacent to the gateway used by the old mail coaches, was used as a lookout by those responsible for caring for the horses.

Visit Ye Olde Black Boy in High Street to see one of the few remaining old pubs in Hull that has kept its original style. Originally opening as a pipe shop in 1720, it has also been a brothel. It became a public house in the 1930s. There are many ghostly tales attached to the old building. Regulars are supposed to have photos of ghostly apparitions; one was grabbed round the neck by a pair of ghostly hands appearing from the bar wall. It was also rumoured that a previous landlord's dog was traumatised by spending a night downstairs in the pub. Who knows what it saw?

Another of the pubs in Hull to retain its original look as a Grade 2 listed building is Ye Olde White Harte down Silver Street which originates from the 1550s. This building contains the famous 'Plotting Parlour' where Sir John Hotham and others plotted against Charles I who arrogantly believed the monarchy had the right to do and take what they pleased. Wanting to levy illegal taxes, 'Ships money', members of the gentry refused to pay. Ye Olde White Harte is also home to the skull of a youth. Doctors and physicians have examined it and a fracture on the top suggests the youth died from a blow to the head. It is suggested an angry, drunk sea captain hit the boy with a pistol. The boy was discovered hidden under the staircase in the 19th century. This skull can still be seen in a Perspex case behind the Small Saloon Bar.

The old Grammar School became a private residence after world war two and a few ghost stories originate from this time. It was rumoured that a vicar or curate wandered the dark corridors and could be seen floating past the first floor windows. Whenever the apparition was seen terrible events would take place.

Learn more about Hull's history, architecture and explore the Old Town with tour guide, Paul Schofield. Tel: 01482 878535.

Things to See

Holy Trinity Church

This magnificent historical building is one of the grandest parochial churches in England. (It is recorded as England's largest parish church by area in the Guinness Book of Records.) Being over 700 years old it has many unique and fascinating features that are well worth a visit. The font dates from 1380 and William Wilberforce was baptised here. Open for both visitors and worship. There are several cafés and pubs located in Trinity Square in front of the church which makes it an ideal place to relax and have a break.

St Mary's Church

In Lowgate, this church is a fine example of a medieval church which has been added to over successive generations. No one is sure when it was built but it is referred to in records in 1327. With years of history to delve into, see four medieval shields high in the east window and Elizabethan panelling in the clergy vestry. William Wilberforce's grandfather was a Churchwarden here and it is reasonable to assume Charles I worshipped here when staying at Wilberforce House.

Humber Bridge

Towering 30 metres above the river Humber, the 2,220 metre long bridge used to be the longest single-span suspension bridge in the world. Now in the Top 5, it is still an awesome feat of engineering. Spend an afternoon taking in the views as you stroll across the bridge or walk under it at Little Switzerland.

Wilberforce Monument

Opposite Queens Gardens, in front of Hull College standing 31 metres high is the Wilberforce Monument - a statue of William Wilberforce, the former Hull MP and anti-slavery campaigner. In 1834 it was situated on Monument Bridge but was moved in 1935 as it became a traffic hazard as the town expanded.

Hull Old Town

Named as one of the nation's best-preserved urban areas, Hull's Old Town is packed with traditional pubs and cafes alongside the museums quarter, which holds four of the city's eight free museums. Enjoy a relaxing bite to eat while absorbing the atmosphere of the medieval cobbled streets.

Museum of Club Culture

Situated in Humber Street, this unique museum celebrates and chronicles all aspects of club culture. Regularly hosting exhibitions and projects to do with club cultures and street styles from around the world.

Fruit Market

Take a stroll from the nearby marina and enjoy the city's fruit market area. The now disused fruit market stores have given way to a bohemian mix of unique venues, shops, museums, art galleries and even a micro brewery.

Architecture

For those interested in architecture the city centre has two good examples of ex cinemas. The Tower (1914-1978) stands on Anlaby Rd. by the southern Hull Paragon Interchange car park and opposite this is the ex Regent cinema (opened 1910), with its fine Art Deco top.

Open Spaces

If you're looking to have a picnic, have a kick about with a ball, walk your dog or just rest your feet, there are various parks around the city.

Queens Dock was once the UK's largest dock and was renamed after Queen Victoria's visit to Hull in 1854. With the arrival of new Docks in the city centre, it was filled in and became Queens Gardens in 1930. You can still see the shape of the dock from overhead and from the walls around it. Sit and enjoy an ice cream or sandwich in the park or feed the ducks. In summer it is host to various concerts and events.

East Park underwent a £10m refurbishment in 2008 and is now one of the premier park venues in the north of England. A great place for all the family, there is an animal education centre with animals and birds, an enclosed deer park, spectacular pavilion which houses a café, two children's play areas, bowling greens, boating/fishing lake with boathouse, model yacht pond, football and rugby pitches, plus beautiful gardens. The open parkland is used for sporting and outdoor events, including music concerts.

West Park, next to the KC Stadium, has also undergone major refurbishment and is a great place to stretch your legs with the dog, or to play with the kids. Pearson Park, between Princes Avenue and Beverley Road, still resonates with Victorian grandeur and features an excellent play area and a conservatory filled with birds, reptiles and fish. The acclaimed poet Philip Larkin lived in a house overlooking Pearson Park from 1956 - 1974. Larkin was heavily influenced by the city and on an autumn afternoon in the park you can experience something of the particular atmosphere that pervades much of his work.

In the Humber Bridge Country Park you can walk below the Humber Bridge to Hessle Foreshore or stroll around the Country Park area known as "Little Switzerland", which used to be a chalk quarry. The only thing left of the old quarry workings is the black painted mill which was used for crushing chalk.

Sport

For sporting things to do the choice is enormous. KC Stadium is home to football's Hull City AFC and rugby league's Hull FC.

Home to both Hull City Football Club and Hull FC, the KC Stadium is a superb state-of-the-art facility which holds 25,000 people for matches and also hosts conferences and events. Watch a match or take part in a tour of the stadium as part of a package. Excellent sporting facilities are also available in and around the Bonus Arena in West Park.

Hull's other first class rugby league team, Hull Kingston

Rovers, is located at Craven Park in East Hull. Rivalry between the two teams in the city is legendary.

Hull Arena is home to an olympic sized skating rink. Watch a game of ice hockey here or try your chances on the ice yourself! Beginners ice skating lessons and family lessons are available. Hull Arena also often hosts concerts by top rock and pop groups from time to time. Check their website for details.
