

Angel Canyon

Angel Canyon is located in Kane County Utah. Kanab Creek runs through the center of the canyon.

The Alcove

The canyon is filled with a number of large alcoves (Figure 1).

One alcove has the remnants of a habitation site with a number of rooms, most likely storage rooms (Figure 2 and 3). Present are pot shards, corn cobs and straw bundles (Figure 4 and 5).

There were pictographs on the ceiling of the alcove. Figure 6 is an image of an anthro painted with red paint. Figures 7 through 9 are of a set of hand prints painted in red and yellow. They are difficult to see due to the poor quality of the rock in the alcove.

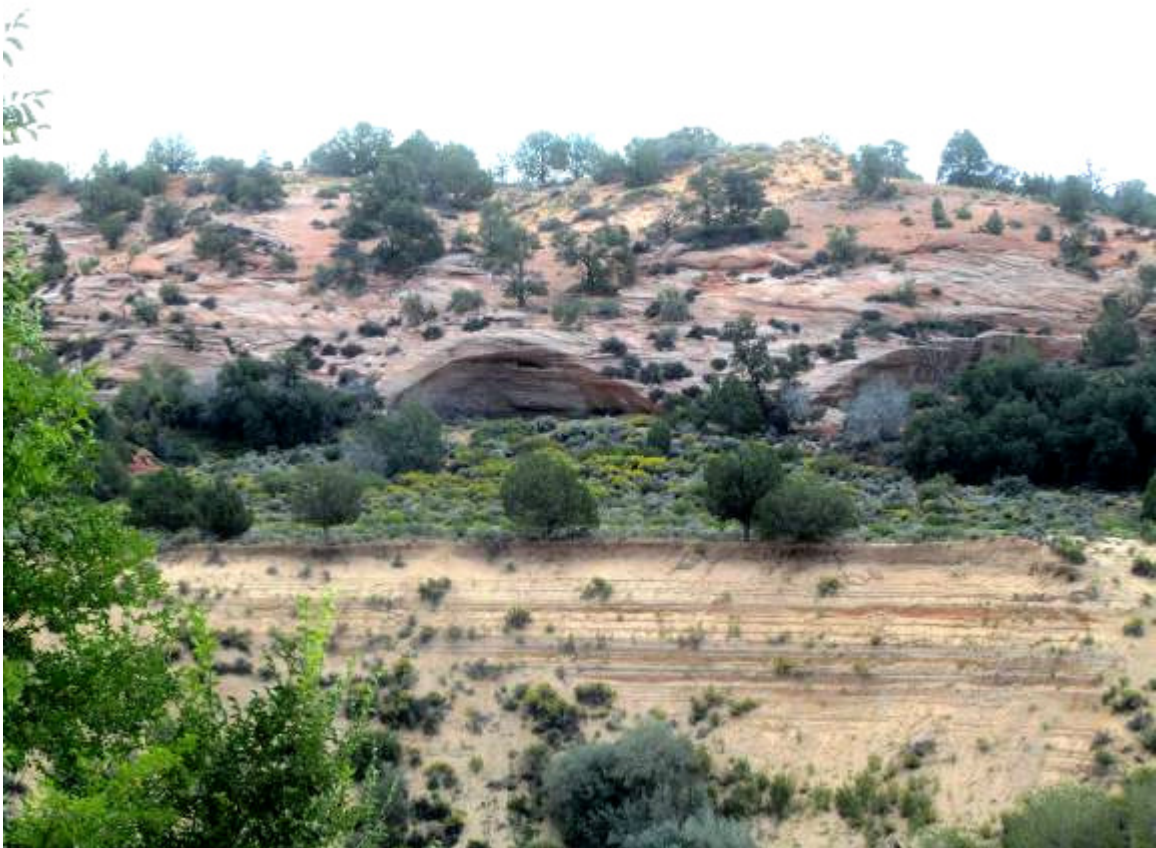

Figure 1

Figure 2

Figure 3

Figure 4

Figure 5

Figure 6

Figure 7

Figure 8

Figure 9

Rock Out Cropping

Also in the canyon is a prominent rock out cropping that has a set of petroglyphs (Figures 10 through 16). The majority of the glyphs are pecked onto a rock whose surface is poor in quality, resulting in glyphs that are badly eroded. The glyphs are still visible because they were pecked very deep into the rock surface.

Figure 10 – Two images that look like owls

Figure 11 – what looks like a 4 legged animal – perhaps a sheep

Figure 12 – what appears to be a stick figure anthro with a very prominent head. The pecking marks are very visible, however the glyph is badly eroded.

Figure 13 – a badly eroded glyph

Figure 14 – a deeply pecked wavy line – perhaps a serpent

Figure 15 – a stylized anthro with a feathered head dress, out stretched arm with perhaps something in each hand, something around his waist. At the right is a double angled line and perhaps an arrow acting as a pointer. This glyph is differ than the others, and is perhaps much newer.

Figure 16 – a very recent glyph

