

Dr. Courtney Teague Chief Learning Technology Officer

Dr. Courtney is the president and principal consultant of Techknowledgey Works and C7 Enterprises, LLC).

She has over 15 years of experience in passionately helping organizations, learning teams, and training professionals successfully transform learning into equitable experiences. She has participated in over 100 industry conferences as a speaker, expert panelist, and workshop trainer. She advises learning and development leaders in areas like virtual classroom strategy, technology selection, logistics, and more.

Dr. Courtney's career experience spans across both the public and private sectors. She has served as an educator in Cobb County School District for over ten years then as a Technology Training Integration Specialist. While at Cobb County School District, she supported the roll-out of Microsoft Office enterprise for over 100 schools. She also worked as a Digital Learning System Administrator for Corporate Brokers on assignment to McKinsey & Company, where she co-led the content management for the mobile learning application launch. In 2017, she joined Digital Promise Global as an Associate Director of Professional Learning, where she led the professional learning model for the Verizon Innovative Learning School coaches. The course is recognized as a graduate-level certification course for Western Governors University as well as micro-credential eligible.

Dr. Courtney's professional experience includes Director of Coaching for Verizon Innovative Learning Schools.

Dr. Courtney is a graduate of Alabama State University, Troy University, and Nova Southeastern University.

She believes that when organizations align learning to their business outcomes and invest in their employees' continual learning experiences, they will see an increase in productivity.