At times, health care providers need to share your mental and behavioral health information to enhance your treatment and to ensure your health and safety or the health and safety of others. OCR is providing specific guidance addressing HIPAA protections, the obligations of covered health care providers, and the circumstances in which covered providers can share information related to mental health and substance use disorder treatment. This guidance addresses some of the more frequently asked questions about when the Privacy Rule permits a health care provider to share the protected health information of a patient who is being treated for a mental health condition. The Rule is carefully balanced to allow uses and disclosures of information—including mental health information—for treatment and certain other purposes with appropriate protections.

Postpartum anxiety is more common than postpartum depression, but is often overlooked. The CAGE screening tool has low sensitivity at lower levels of Several DSM-5 criteria lasting 6 months or longer can help identify complicated grief, as can available assessment tools. Treatment has a Used together, brief assessment tools, such as the PHQ9 and MDQ, have greater sensitivity and accuracy than clinician assessment alone. Skip to main content. Most of a cat's actions during play are similar to actions it would take when hunting. Some cats like to chase lasers around a room, which mimics the motions of pouncing on a mouse, while others enjoy lunging at feather toys, which is an example of trying to catch a bird. All cats are natural climbers, which is why cat trees are so popular among the kitty crowd. A good scratching post mimics a tree that a cat would use in the wild to sharpen its claws.

Cats have a variety of sounds they use to communicate with other animals and people. The most common sound is a "meow.
