

Nixon White House Tapes

Introduction to the Tapes Index and Finding Aids

The Nixon Presidential Library and Museum offers the Nixon Tapes Index as a tool to search and quickly locate conversations relating to specific individuals, locations, dates, and participants. This package includes Tape Subject Logs, Transcripts, Scope and Content Notes, and Indices to aid you in identifying conversations relevant to your research interests.

- Tape Subject Logs provide general outlines of each conversation. A log contains references to the people, places, and topics being discussed in a specific conversation, in the order in which they are mentioned.
- Transcripts are available for a select pool of conversations: those created by the Watergate Special Prosecution Force or in response to court orders. Outside of these court-ordered transcripts, the Nixon Library does not typically transcribe the White House Tapes. The National Archives does not guarantee the accuracy of any transcript.
- Scope and Content Notes provide overviews of each batch of tapes as they were released to the general public. These documents may include a description of the quality and quantity of the tapes as well as general topics of interest within the set of opened conversations. Scope and Content Notes typically offer a brief history of the taping system and describe processing procedures.
- Indices include database reports listing conversations by date and by conversation number as well as lists of name abbreviations, geographic terms, and organizational acronyms.

The Nixon Tapes Index works across operating systems (Mac and PC), but does require Adobe Reader 5.0 or higher to operate.

Getting Started

- Open the file called “Nixon Tapes Index.pdx.”

- The file will open Adobe Reader.
- In the Adobe Reader application, go to the Edit menu. Select “Preferences.”
 - In the dialogue box that opens, select “Search” from the Categories listing.
 - Change the “Maximum number of documents returned in Results” to 1000.

- Click “OK” to have the preference take effect.

Sample Search

- Always begin by clicking the “Nixon Tapes Index.pdx” icon to utilize the index.

- Input “panda” into the search interface:

- This search should yield a number of hits. Toggle to open the listing of documents.

- Double-click on the document of your choice. When a document opens, note the options in the top, right-hand corner. The “Comments” option will provide more information.
- Click the tab to view comments.

- The content of comments varies depending on the type of document opened:
 - Tape Subject Logs
 - Comments list the conversation number, date, and participants for each conversation on the tape.
 - Partial Transcripts
 - Comments include location, conversation number, date, and participants.
 - AoGP Excerpted Tape Subject Logs
 - Comments include tape numbers and reference cassette range for each tape included in that month's conversations.
 - Watergate Trial Tapes Transcripts
 - Comments location, conversation number, date, participants, and reference cassette number.
 - Watergate Special Prosecution Force Transcripts
 - Comments include location, conversation number, date, participants, and reference cassette number.
 - Note: Use the Name Abbreviations list to understand the abbreviations used for participants (example: "P" stands for President Richard M. Nixon while "HAK" stands for Henry A. Kissinger). The Name Abbreviations list is located in the Indices folder, within the Complete Conversations folder.

Search Tips

- To search by date:
 - Use these formats:
 - Month Day, Year
 - Example: November 12, 1972
 - Search results will be located directly within the Tape Subject Log
 - mm/dd/yyyy
 - Examples: 3/17/1971 -or- 11/9/1972
 - Search results will be within database reports
- To search for a conversation:
 - Input the conversation number and check the “Whole words only” box.

- If you do not select “Whole words only,” be advised that you will get search hits on 133-1, 233-1, 333-1, etc. when searching for conversation “33-1.”

- Additionally, significant conversations such as “smoking gun,” “milk fund,” “18 1/2 minute gap,” and “cancer on the Presidency” can be searched using those terms, if you check “Include comments” during your search.
- To search for participants:
 - Locate the appropriate abbreviation from the Name Abbreviation list.

- Input the abbreviation and check the boxes: “Whole words only,” “Case-Sensitive,” and “Includes Comments.”

Additional Helpful Information

- The search interface retains search restrictions such as “Case-Sensitive” between searches and application uses. You must uncheck these boxes to begin with a session with an unrestricted search.
- The search interface reads quotation marks literally.
 - To demonstrate, typing the exact string “dairy farmer” will return no results:

Whereas a search for the words dairy farmer and checking the “Whole words only” box will yield two search returns:

- In Adobe Reader, the maximum number of documents you can open at once is fifty (50).
 - To close out documents without losing index results, click the gray “X” box in the upper right corner.

- Do NOT click the red “X” box because doing so will close the application and you will lose the search results.

Tapes 171, 173, 175, 187, 600, 680, 950 are blank.

Tapes from July 1972 to March 1973 (colored GREEN) are available for free mp3 download at nixonlibrary.gov.

All tape recordings are available at the Nixon Presidential Library and Museum in Yorba Linda, CA and the National Archives and Records Administration in College Park, MD.

Cabinet Room tapes, however, are not yet available online. While the Cabinet Room tapes were opened separately and prior to the chronological releases, they are listed here for researcher convenience.
