Since the late 1990s, numerous California based TV news outlets have reported on, the now wildly out-of-control organized-stalking epidemic in California. These accounts, that have been broadcast to millions of viewers, both via traditional cable news and online broadcasting platforms, have somehow been largely ignored, by both law enforcement and legislators in California. Currently, Dr. Tomo Shibata—who has been targeted with organized stalking and electronic weapons in California—is presenting a bill proposal to California legislators, to explicitly outlaw organized stalking and electronic weapon attacks, that is titled “The Organized Torture Act”. As these legislators review Dr. Shibata’s bill proposal, I thought it would be helpful to collect and present in unison, a number of the most revealing reports, on organized-stalking and electronic weapon targeting, that have been broadcast by California TV news outlets and beyond, on the plight of Californians, who are victims of these horrendous crimes.

January 29, 2011

The KION TV moderator opens this TV news segment by stating that the police have told KION that the phenomenon they are reporting on is like “bullying on steroids”, implicit in this statement by KION, is the police department’s admission that these surreal stalking crimes are a real criminal phenomenon.

Salinas California resident, and victim of an organized stalking campaign, Lawrence Guzzino, is interviewed about what it is like to be subjected to these kind of surreal crimes. Journalist Candice Nguyen states with certainty a few of the tactics used against victims of these crimes.

This news report included an interview with Santa Cruz California Police Lieutenant Larry Richard, who explicitly admits organized stalking is a real phenomenon that has been occurring for a long time, in this statement:

“The police are becoming more aware of gang stalking because of cyber bullying. Gang stalking is nothing new, but new technology is making it more common. Gang stalkers themselves have elevated themselves to technology so this is something that’s been going on before Facebook or Twitter. They just now have gone into those areas.”

The Learning Channel

"Ultrascience: Spies Are Us"

Fall Season 1998

In this episode of The Learning Channel's 1990s series Ultrascience, Davis California resident, law student, and victim of organized-stalking, Cheryl Welsh, describe how she and other victims of organized-stalking, are harmed by electronic weapons.

Neurobiologist Dr. Mark George, and Professor James Lin are interviewed by the producers of the show, as to the plausibility of the existence of electronic weapons and their capabilities; Dr. George communicates that it is already possible, with 1990s technology, to influence an individual's emotional state with magnetic electronic devices. Dr. George also communicates that in the wrong hands this technology could be used for evil objectives, and it is up to society to see to it that it is used for the good of society. Moreover, Professor Lin states that it is possible to encode specific sounds in microwaves, from a magnetic electronic device, that could be interpreted by an individual's brain as a natural phenomenon. Again, keep in mind this interview was conducted in 1998, so he's talking about old technology relative to our current era—the capabilities of these surreal technologies have dramatically expanded in the last 20 years. Professor Lin sums up these surreal technologies in this statement:

“The brain is an electrical organ it is susceptible to electrical signals since microwave is electrical therefore in principle one could embed or encode information in the microwave signal so that it could be perceived by the brain.”

Former U.S. Intelligence Officer Steve Bratcher, is also interviewed by the producers of the show and communicates that governments, currently and historically, proactively seek to use electronic weapons to force their will on select individuals, select communities, and indeed, at times the entire population.
