The 2021 Guide

Editor's Note

Spring is in the air, vaccinations are in (many) arms, and our hardy crop of mountain, lakeside, and pastorally sited music-makers appear to be in major recovery mode from a very long, dark year.

Our 2021 Festival Guide lists 100-plus entries, some still in the throes of program planning, others with their schedules nailed down, one or two strictly online, and most a combination of all of the above. We've asked each about their COVID-19 safety protocols, along with their usual dates, places, artists, and assorted platforms. Many are equipped to head outside: Aspen Music Festival, Tanglewood, and Caramoor Music Center already have outdoor venues. Those that don't are finding them: Central City Opera Festival is taking Carousel and Rigoletto to a nearby Garden Center and staging Dido & Aeneas in its backyard; the Bay Chamber Concerts Screen Door Festival is headed to the Camden (ME) Amphitheater.

Still others are busy constructing their own pavilions: "Glimmerglass on the Grass" is one, with 90-minute re-imagined performances of The Magic Flute, Il Trovatore, and the premiere of The Passion of Mary Cardwell Dawson. The Virginia Arts Festival has also built a new open-air facility called the Bank Street Stage, a large tent area with pod seating options.

Repertoire range is as broad as ever, with the Cabrillo Festival priding itself on being "America's longest-running festival of new orchestral music"; Bang on a Can will make as much avant-garde noise as humanly possible with its "Loud Weekend" at Mass MOCA and its composer trainings later in the summer. Standard repertoire remains prevalent; Beethoven anniversary celebrations forced to cancel last summer are on the agenda for the Rome and Montreal chamber music festivals, among others.

We've heard from the been-around-forever standbys, like the Salzburg Festival and Marlboro Music Festivals, and a few newcomers, such as the Berkshire and the West Edge opera festivals.

About this time in 2020, the light at the end of the tunnel was growing dimmer by the second. May our festival colleagues continue to make it brighter.

Regards,

Susan Elliott

28th AMEROPA INTERNATIONAL CHAMBER MUSIC ACADEMY

FESTIVAL HIGHLIGHTS

"Ameropa" was founded as an international organization for chamber music in 1993 by Professor Vadim Mazo (U.S.). Its main idea is to build the so-called "Musical Bridges" between AMERica and EuROPA with classical music, a medium that has no borders in the world.

Ameropa is based in Prague, where the tradition of chamber music dates back to the time of W.A. Mozart and other greats of that era, all of whom were enchanted by the picturesqueness, cultural originality, and innate musicality of the city. Mozart dedicated his famous opera Don Giovanni to Prague.

To this day, you will not find a country with such a large number of excellent professional chamber music ensembles, spreading the fame of Czech music around the world, starting in the 20th century with the world-famous Smetana Quartet. Come and visit us at this European musical metropolis and experience its unique summer music atmosphere.

LA JOLLA MUSIC SOCIETY SUMMERFEST

FESTIVAL HIGHLIGHTS

SummerFest 2021 Theme: Self + Sound. Composers use music to express their individuality and their identity, celebrate and idealize their nationality, convey their love, and immortalize friends and family. Yet for all its highly individual expression, music is also universal and speaks to us equally. This summer's program explores how composers write themselves into their music, and how the diversity of influences that make us unique finds its expression in sound.

OXFORD LIEDER FESTIVAL

FESTIVAL HIGHLIGHTS

"Nature's Songbook" is the title of the 20th anniversary Oxford Lieder Festival, exploring the manifold appearances of flora, fauna, landscapes, and the elements in poetry and song across the ages. An array of internationally acclaimed singers includes Sarah Connolly, Dietrich Henschel, Thomas Oliemans, Christoph Prégardien, Dorothea Röschmann, Carolyn Sampson, Robin Tritschler, Roderick Williams, and many others, alongside the best emerging artists and a complementary series of chamber music, choral works, and study events.

For many, the past year has led to a strengthened relationship with nature and the Festival will celebrate that: from the recurring motif of water in the songs of Schubert to a new work from Associate Composer Cheryl Frances-Hoad (co-commissioned with the Oxford Botanic Garden in celebration of its 400th anniversary) to a journey around the landscapes of Scandinavia. The historic city of Oxford provides a stunning backdrop for a fortnight comprising over 100 events. In-person attendance is anticipated in the city's many ideal song venues, but Oxford Lieder will also build on its hugely successful online Festival in 2020 and livestream much of the programming, bringing a thrilling and immersive fortnight of exploration, discovery, and inspiration direct to people's homes around the globe.
