Trade Paperback eBook. Table of Contents Excerpt Rave and Reviews. About The Book. We learn that Terah, the father of Abraham, was a High Priest of Enlil in Nippur, the most sacred city and first capital of Sumer, created by and dedicated to Enlil. Then Terah went to live in Ur, the new capital, the city of Nannar, heir of Enlil, when this god was given the spiritual and administrative tutorship of the two cities, corresponding with the crowning of King Ur-Nammu. An immense deception and questioning emerged in the minds of Sumerians, about the very Chief of the gods, Enlil, clearly expressed in the tablets. This very year, Terah moved with his family--notably the young couple Abram Abraham, 27 years old, and his wife and half-sister Sarai Sarah --to Harran, a town on the Euphrates River, in Hittites Land, northwest of Sumer.

When Abraham was 75, he was instructed by the Deity to leave Harran and go south, and he left with his wife and his nephew Lot, whose father had died. It is at this occasion that we can surmise that Abraham--raised to be the next High Priest of Enlil--being childless, chose Lot to be his adopted son, through whom the priestly line would pass. It was an Assembly of the Gods that approved the use of nukes to destroy Marduk and his son Nabu. The most violent support and incentive for the use of nukes came from Nergal backed by Enlil.

The land was thoroughly scorched by the contaminated wind. The only exception, the only city that escaped destruction, was the abode of Marduk, Babylon.
