The Everyday Wonder of

Finances

Transformation: Regular or Rare?

Last month my son, Michael, turned 16, which, in many cultures and traditions, is a time to celebrate the transformation between being a child and an adult, or at least a young adult. My wife, Toni, and I wanted to make this a special birthday for him - a celebration that he would remember for the rest of his life. We created a unique ceremony for him involving family and his friends that culminated in each person sharing their love, support and advice about becoming a "good" man in our world.

The celebration was a success in many ways, and I found myself thinking deeper about the idea of celebrating "big" or "important" times in our lives, like the ones we might call transformational. When would he next celebrate a transformation in his life? Maybe high school graduation? Or passing his driver's test? Or getting married?

During my time of contemplation, I heard myself question, "What makes a moment transformational?" My short answer to this question was: Transformation happens when an event leads to a profound change in our thinking and/or behavior that positively affects our lives. Being happy with that definition, I began to think about how often we celebrate times of transformation in our lives, and they seemed rare.

Then, another question emerged, "Who determines what is a 'big or important' enough event in our lives that it would be defined as transformational? There are only two answers to this question: others or us. While neither answer is a wrong, when we each decide what is meaningful in our lives, we open the door to living a life more fulfilled, because we do not have to dictate our joys according to a prescribed list of rare moments that someone else defined as life changing.

I suggest we begin to look at and celebrate ourselves, and others, more often. I am sure that as we each consciously choose to look for and discover transformational moments in our lives, we will find we are celebrating regularly, rather than rarely.

The Everyday Wonder of Finances

As we begin our contemplation and wonder about Finances, we'll follow the path of a treatment. The first: God is. We look at the Infinite Source. Next, we go to I am/We are. We look at our nature and how it interacts effectively, or not, with the Infinite Abundance. Then we'll take a head-on look at the nature of money, and our individual and collective beliefs about it, to dispel the clouds and stand in clarity. Finally, we look at the threefold process of the flow of Good. Have fun!

October 2022 Weekly Talks

CSLSG Senior Minister Reverend Joe Kovach

October 2nd - Swimming in the Infinite Ocean

We begin at the Beginning – Infinite Source. We look at the abundant nature of the Universe, everywhere and always fully present, and the sacredness of Wealth. We expand our idea of how big “Big” really is.

October 16th - Playing With Money

The abundance, opulence and joy of the Universe should be reflected in our lives, since we are expressions of the Universe. When we recognize that we have the privilege of using this Divine Idea in the Mind of God, money, as a tool to express the nature of the Divine, we open to its sacredness, as well as our own and the world's.

October 23rd - Money, So They Say...

So much of our trauma around money is based in myths and old, stinkin' thinkin', and false beliefs. Let's apply Everyday Wonder and compassionate curiosity to those beliefs and set ourselves free!

October 9th Guest Speaker Stef Swink, RScP

Let It Flow

We live in a Universe of Infinite Abundance of every form of wealth – love, health, financial freedom, creativity and more. And many are starving. The infinite flowing reservoir is always available, but we only let a trickle through. Our consciousness is filled with rules, with beliefs of lack and limitation, and self loathing and devaluing. These rules and beliefs choke the flow of the Infinite Good down to a mere trickle. Our work is to get our foot off the hose and let the natural Abundance of the Universe flow in our lives.

October 30th
Practitioners Unplugged

Share It, Fair It.

Do Take a Slice of My Pie

Like all of Life, money is a flow. "The financial system consists of the flows of capital that take place between individuals, governments, and businesses. 'Finance' thus studies the process of channeling money from savers and investors to entities that need it." (Wikipedia, "Finance") So, Everyday Wonder about finances is learning about the flow and how we can participate in a healthy way.
