

Amy Danielson, OTD, OTR/L

Specialty: Occupational Therapist

Amy earned her Clinical Doctorate and Masters degrees in Occupational Therapy at the University of Southern California. Completing her doctoral residency at the USC Occupational Therapy Faculty Practice, Amy specialized in lifestyle interventions for management of various chronic issues such as migraine, anxiety, ADHD, and weight management. During this rotation, she also treated with USC's Pain Clinic and the Head and Face Pain teams. Amy's other clinical experiences range from wellness and prevention, skilled-nursing level care, and mental health. Following her graduation, Amy returned to her hometown of Portland, OR, and joined the team at NWOMC. Amy leads OT treatment in the Work Hardening and Injury Management programs, as well as conducts Functional Capacity Evaluations, Work-Hardening Evaluations, and treats patients with hand injuries.

Outside of clinical practice, Amy enjoys the arts, fishing, hiking, and spending time with friends and family.
