Leadership as a relationship limits leadership only to the appointed head of the organization. Leaders who draw on the behavioral perspective are concerned with task and process behaviors. A leader who views leadership as a relationship can be influenced by his or her followers. The study of leadership is relatively new, having started only in the 20th century. There are universally recognized positive and negative leadership traits. Effective leadership is intended influence that creates change for the greater good.

Studying characteristics such as confidence and determination exemplifies leadership as a trait. The Fourth Edition of Peter G. The text is organized around key leader responsibilities such as creating a vision, establishing a constructive climate, listening to outgroup members, and overcoming obstacles.
