President's Message

October is always a wonderful month for Airedalers! First we have Montgomery weekend, which actually used to be just a weekend. The Devon and Hatboro shows were held on Friday and Saturday, and then on Sunday the Airedale Terrier Club of America held its National Specialty and Sweepstakes at the Montgomery Kennel Club's All Terrier Show.(Hence the name "Montgomery weekend.")

Over the years, obedience and agility events have been added and now the "weekend" begins on Tuesday with all Terrier agility trials, and continues throughout the entire week with all Terrier and Airedale only obedience and rally events. When the weather is good it is a sublime event. When the weather is bad, and it can be very, very bad, it is still a sublime event but a challenging one! Showing dogs in pouring rain or 5 inches of mud (that year was nicknamed Mudgomery) takes incredible fortitude and dedication. Actually, spectating under those conditions takes the same qualities! Still, every Airedale admirer should try to include at least one trip in his lifetime to the events of that week. It is an amazing adventure.

The weekend after Montgomery was our Airedale Square, held after Airedale judging at the Catonsville Kennel Club dog show held at Howard County Fairgrounds. Having come on board as your President rather unexpectedly, I didn't get to the powers that be to request a later judging time for Airedales. So we were assigned a 9 am judging time, and with only 5 Airedales entered, judging wasn't going to last very long! With Airedale adaptability, we decided to opt for a BRUNCH rather than our usual lunch, and we all got together at 10 am with a delicious combination of breakfast casseroles, bagels, sweet rolls, fruit, coffee and so much more! Nora Dudman did her usual outstanding job of organizing, setting up, seeing to it that everyone had plenty to eat, and then breaking down and cleaning up afterwards. The food was delicious and there were many new faces among the attendees, all of who had such a good time that they are applying for membership to the ATCMW! And Pam McKusick and Ed Burns set up and manned the table for the rescue sales items.

If you've never attended, you are missing a wonderful opportunity to visit with other Airedalers and their dogs and to shop at the great variety of venders who attend this multiple day show site.

October was also a good month for our Rescue Committee's fund raising activities. Two limited raffles were held, the first for a rare acrylic Ric Chashoudian Airedale statue and the second for a truly beautiful quilted Christmas wall hanging made and donated by Jeanne Esmond. Both raffles sold out quickly and raised a total of $1800.00 for rescue activities. Linda Buonauro (NJ) won the drawing for the statue, and Pam Napier-Pfaff (GA) won the quilted wall hanging. Thanks to everyone who made these fundraising events so successful.

The final fund raising event of the year for rescue will be held at the November 13th luncheon meeting. There will be a number of "theme" baskets that will be raffled off. Tickets will be sold at the meeting and the drawing held after lunch. The first ticket drawn will have first choice of the baskets; the second ticket drawn will have second choice and so on.

The last club event of this year will be the Scottish Walk in Alexandria on December 4th. Watch the web site at <http://www.airedales-dc.org> for more details!

Happy Airedaling!

Cleo goes to nose work camp

We often say to each other, "my dog has a great nose." Actually, though, most dogs have good noses; it's how they use their noses and their intelligence to solve problems that really excites admiration. On the Labor Day weekend, Cleo and I attended Nose Work camp in the Poconos. In case you haven't heard, Nose Work is a new dog sport founded by experienced drug and explosive detection trainers. It began in California and is gaining popularity across the country because most people who try it love it and all the dogs love it.

No dog need be excluded because of prior training, temperament or breed. Each dog does his scent discrimination work alone and prior obedience work or complete lack of it has no bearing on success. Also, although reactive/aggressive dogs are banned from many organized dog sports, nose work provides a great opportunity for these dogs and their owners to enjoy a sport together. At the camp there were many dogs wearing red bandanas, warning all that they needed their space.

This is a wonderful sport for Airedales because the dogs are given no direction. The Airedale's heart's desire is to work independently and that's exactly what this is about. Unlike obedience, rally or even agility, the owner's role in nose work is only to set up problems for the dog himself to solve. To a dog, the scent of the hidden object has a 3-dimensional form as distinct as a red sports car might be for you. Obviously we humans can't see the scent. If we interfere we will certainly mislead the dog and, worse, teach him not to trust himself. Trust your dog must be our mantra and it will help us develop patience.

Cardboard boxes are the basic tool for teaching the sport to dogs and their owners. On their first day at camp, the new dogs were shown a few boxes with some food in one of the boxes. At first Cleo was just curious about the boxes; then she realized there was a hide of dried salmon somewhere there and without voice or leash direction decided to search for it. For each search the boxes were rearranged so that she had no visual memory to help her search. At each session, there was a new environment and more boxes; then other objects were added, sometimes the food was elevated, sometimes at ground level. Sometimes we worked indoors, sometimes outdoors. Of course, as training progresses, the dogs will learn to do searches without boxes. After the dogs have become proficient at finding the food in a great variety of environments and weather conditions, we will begin pairing the food with an odor; eventually the dog will have to search only for an odor.

After I got home, I started my youngest dog, a clicker-trained lab, on the box work. At first, he kept looking back at me, wanting me to click on something. Finally, he gave up on the clicker and strolled around the boxes until he found and took the dried liver. Even after a number of successful trials on that first day, he was still puzzled, still looking for a click, but I didn't help him. I waited several days (that wonderful doggie incubation period) before I tried again. This time he hurled himself onto the deck where I had set up the problem and immediately began an independent search with real purpose. Still, when things got difficult, he tried to extract clicks from me. He'll get over that. Meanwhile though, Cleo Airedale never asks questions; just goes to work.

If you introduce problems at the right pace, you will find that a lot of very interesting thinking goes on in your dog's head. I'll just give one example. I distributed some boxes around the yard outside our kitchen porch and hid some salmon in a box behind a trash barrel. Cleo didn't find that box searching on the ground (there was little breeze to help her), but she went back to the other end of the area, up the kitchen porch steps, stood there with nose raised and nostrils vibrating for several seconds, then down the porch steps at the opposite end from the hide, calmly walked back to a point below where she had been standing on the porch; then went directly around the right barrel and took the salmon.

A word of warning: I've just touched the surface here, so don't use this little article as the basis for starting your dog. For more about nose work, see the National Association of Canine Scent Work website

Airedale Limericks

There once was an Airedale named Sandy
Who thought he was really quite manly
He was up on his toes
When a squirrel stuck a pose
He took off with his tail in his fanny!

There once was an Airedale named Katie
Who thought that she was quite the lady
She stole food from my plate
Ate the trash when I was late
She was shady this lady called Katie!
