The Open Society Foundations work to build vibrant and tolerant democracies whose governments are accountable to their citizens. To achieve this mission, the Foundations seek to shape public policies that assure greater fairness in political, legal, and economic systems and safeguard fundamental rights. On a local level, the Open Society Foundations implement a range of initiatives to advance justice, education, public health, and independent media. At the same time, we build alliances across borders and continents on issues such as corruption and freedom of information. The Foundations place a high priority on protecting and improving the lives of people in marginalized communities.

Bloomberg LP, Founder

Bloomberg Businessweek

☐ Heather Carpenter, +1-212-617-1661

In 1981 Bloomberg started out with one core belief: that bringing transparency to capital markets through access to information could increase capital flows, produce economic growth and jobs, and significantly reduce the cost of doing business. Today's Bloomberg builds on that foundation - everything we do connects decision makers in business, finance and government to a broad and dynamic network of information, news, people and ideas that enables faster, more effective decisions.

The Albert and Mary Lasker Foundation and its programs are dedicated to the support of biomedical research toward conquering disease, improving human health and extending life.

The Lasker Awards

The Lasker Foundation's Awards Program recognizes the contributions of scientists, physicians, and public servants who have made major advances in the understanding, diagnosis, treatment, cure or prevention of human disease.

Other Programs

Although the Lasker Foundation is not a grant-giving organization, it does support select initiatives that raise awareness of medical discoveries and their benefits to human health, and that increase support for the medical science enterprise. These initiatives have included study groups, Congressional briefings, innovative web-based programs, educational forums, and scholarly studies.

The Foundation's mission is to foster the prevention and treatment of disease and disabilities by honoring excellence in basic and clinical science, by educating the public, and by advocating for support of medical research.

The Foundation's values are:

Integrity

Independence from political and corporate influence

Impartiality in efforts to educate and raise awareness about the benefits of medical research to human health

Championship of bold and creative medical science

Setting standards for research excellence

T. Boone Pickens

Mesa Petroleum, Founder

BP Capital, Founder

Jay Rosser

214-265-4165

jay@bpcap.net

In 2007, T. Boone Pickens created a privately held company, Mesa Power Group, LLC., to develop and finance wind and other renewable energy power projects. Mesa Power, based in Dallas, Texas, contracts with several outside consultants. Mesa's employees and consultants have a wide range of experience and expertise in wind, solar, and other alternative energy activities.

Pickens, who attracted national attention in July 2008 by launching the Pickens Plan, a grass-roots internet, multi-media and personal appearance campaign that seeks a comprehensive energy plan to lessen the U.S. dependence on foreign oil, brings more than 50 years of experience in the oil and gas industry. He is the founder of Mesa Petroleum, an independent producer of natural gas and oil, and BP Capital, a private investment firm focusing on investments in energy futures and stocks of public companies in various energy sectors and energy dependent industries. For "his vision and leadership in moving the wind industry forward," the American Wind Energy Association named Pickens its 2009 Industry Person of the Year.

Boone's Letter to the Pickens Plan Army

When we started the Pickens Plan campaign, oil prices were at an all time high. The Pickens Plan was meant to be a comprehensive energy plan for how to use our country's resources and technology to reduce our staggering dependence on OPEC oil. As I've said before: I'm for everything American, and there was a lot of focus particularly on my interest in renewable energy — wind and solar — to generate electricity, and in natural gas to fuel trucks, buses and fleets.

Together, we made important progress on wind power — Congress included in last year's stimulus bill incentives to help develop more renewable energy and get it online. While my wind farm in Pampa has had delays, I am engaged in wind development initiatives in the U.S. and Canada, and many others have answered the call and started erecting their own turbines. Thanks to what we did as part of the Pickens Plan, there are wind farms already in development from Texas all the way up to North Dakota.

Wind is a big part of America's future, as are all American energy sources, but it can't reduce our dependence on OPEC oil — to do that you have to address our imported oil use in transportation. That is why I have been urging Congress and the President to enact policies to help get trucks, buses and fleets running on clean, abundant and domestic fuels, such as natural gas.

We need to start using our abundant natural gas resources to reduce our ever-escalating dependence on OPEC oil and the threat it poses to our national security and economy. With oil again nearing $100 a barrel, the need has never been greater and the opportunity never larger.

Integrated philanthropy. The 1/1/1 model.

The Salesforce.com Foundation is based on a simple idea: Donate 1% of salesforce.com's resources to support organizations that are working to make our world a better place.

Our 1% model is all about getting the most bang for the buck. We take just a fraction of salesforce.com's time, product, and equity, and give it to social-change organizations so they can amplify their impact.

1% time. We promote a culture of caring and help Salesforce.com employees find meaningful ways to spend their 6 paid days off a year devoted to volunteerism.

1% product. Donated and discounted Salesforce CRM licenses help nonprofits increase their data management and operational effectiveness so they can focus on their core missions.

1% equity. Founding stock provides funds for grants and monetary assistance, especially to support youth, technology, and employee-inspired volunteer projects.

The Foundation's ultimate goal? To disseminate our financial and intellectual wealth to better equip our communities to address their challenges.

On Labor Day weekend in 1995, computer programmer Pierre Omidyar wrote the code for what he called an "experiment": What would happen if everyone in the world had equal access to a single global marketplace?

Pierre tested his new auction website by posting a broken laser pointer, which he was about to throw away. And to his surprise, a collector bought it for $14.83. The sale of a broken laser pointer was the beginning of a radical transformation in commerce.

eBay is a remarkably efficient market created by connecting individuals who wouldn't otherwise be connected. It was the world's first example of online social networking. While skeptics questioned whether people would trust doing business with strangers online, Pierre firmly believed that people are basically good, and that any issues would work themselves out by the community.

Since then, eBay has grown to have a presence in 39 markets (including partnerships and investments) with more than 90 million eBay.com users worldwide, trading more than $1,900 worth of goods each second. In 2002, the eBay community made it clear that they preferred using PayPal as an online payment method. So eBay acquired PayPal, which brought new efficiencies to e-commerce and redefined possibilities for eBay's future. The company has since expanded by acquiring innovative businesses, such as Shopping.com, StubHub, Bill Me Later and others, which have positioned the company as the global leader in e-commerce and payments.

Building on Pierre's entrepreneurial legacy, eBay continues to passionately believe in the potential of technology to connect people around the world. Read more about our global portfolio of businesses and how we continue to support entrepreneurship.

The Pittsburgh Foundation works to improve the quality of life in the Pittsburgh region by evaluating and addressing community issues, promoting responsible philanthropy and connecting donors to the critical needs of the community.

The Foundation's policy governing its unrestricted or discretionary grantmaking was revised under the Foundation's strategic plan in 2009, with the creation of three new funding categories designed to capture all of the community's charitable programming needs.

Its five Target Areas of Impact introduced nearly seven years previously, were replaced by integrating the key issues of environment, economics, and social equity into its three new funding guideline categories:

Self Sufficient Individuals and Families,
Healthy Communities, and
A Vibrant Democracy.

The first includes education, affordable housing, public transportation, healthy children and adults and job development. Healthy Communities covers ecological issues, the creation of safe communities, cultural and racial diversity, creative arts and the encouragement of excellence in civic design. A Vibrant Democracy includes civic engagement and the research and dissemination of information around critical community issues, designed to inform and shape public policy.

Additional areas are included for grantmaking through the Foundation's donoradvised, designated, fields of interest, scholarship, medical research and responsiveness funds.

The mission of YoungArts, a program of the National Foundation for Advancement in the Arts, is to identify emerging artists and assist them at critical junctures in their educational and professional development, and to raise the appreciation for, and support of, the arts in American Society.

The Young Arts vision is threefold:

To expand its national presence and increase awareness and support for YoungArts across the United States. YoungArts accomplishes this through the expansion of regional programs, the engagement of high-value partners, the creation of an Education Advisory Council and Artistic Advisory Council and by positioning alumni and Presidential Scholars as ambassadors for the organization.

To emphasize experiences.

Through the various YoungArts programs and master classes the organization is creating experiences that students will draw upon for the rest of their lives. As one alumna eloquently said:

“With each day that I draw and paint, I feel stronger and more confident about my decision to pursue art as a career, and a large portion of my growing artistic convictions come from my experiences at YoungArts week.”

– Paige Chin, 2007 Winner in Visual Arts

To establish the YoungArts connection by using technology to expand and strengthen communication links between everyone associated with the organization. YoungArts reaches students, educators, alumni, parents, sponsors and partners in an ongoing and ever-expanding way.

While Paychex employees contribute to many programs and organizations around the country, Paychex focuses its corporate contributions exclusively on the Rochester, NY area. There are no general restrictions on the type of organization or program supported, but preference is given to initiatives that will improve the quality of life in the community. Some examples of these initiatives include programs designed to:

- Combat alcohol and drug abuse, particularly in teens.
- Provide economic development and social services to needy families.
- Reduce dropout rates and encourage improved academic performance.
- Combat hunger and homelessness.
- Provide services to individuals dealing with physical or mental disabilities.

Paychex does not support:

- Fundraising events.
- Sports teams.
- Initiatives that benefit a single individual or a small group of individuals.

Requests for support are reviewed once per month. Formal requests will receive a written response.
