

JAYLA'S JAUNTS "Do you also like to roam?"

Jayla's Jaunts:
All About Alabama

If you could go any place where would you go? Imagine that your choice isn't limited to a space but also included a time. These are the options made available to you in Jayla's Jaunts, an incredible children's literature series written by Senyah Haynes the Publisher and Owner of Palindrome Global Publishing & Events.

Jayla's Jaunts is the fantastic fictional story of a young and intrepid African American girl who led by her fabulous, mysterious, and magical Aunt Yah-Yah travels the 50 states and territories of the United States. Her tour guide doesn't just magically transport Jayla to each state in alphabetical order. Aunt Yah-Yah also invokes the timeless African oral tradition by teaching her niece numerous essential and often overlooked histories and contributions of African Americans to the country.

In just the first two current volumes, Alabama and Alaska, Haynes presents the events of Bloody Sunday, the triumph of the Tuskegee Airmen, the contributions of Booker T. Washington, Rosa Parks, George Washington Carver and the numerous unknown African Americans who despite an intentional depravity of resources on the part of the segregated Army Core of Engineers, connected Alaska to the lower 48 states.

Publisher & Owner

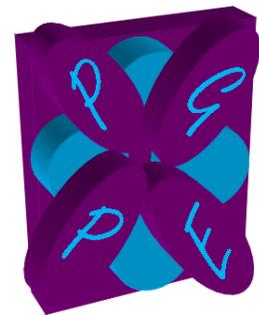

Haynes masterfully and intentionally presents these facts in easily digestible amounts while making use of age appropriate lyrical prose and beautifully vibrant illustrations providing an affirming, entertaining, and educational journey through history for readers of all ages. The author even includes a glossary of terms at the end of each work.

In addition to being a writer, Senyah Haynes has been a youth development professional for 20 years and has served children through the vehicles of educational theatre, curricula design, and in-class program instruction. She is the Founder of Diasporal Discoveries, a youth-serving organization that provides cultural studies programs and travel opportunities to young people (predominately on the Southside of Chicago). Senyah has a passion for globetrotting, historical research, and cultural exploration, especially as it pertains to the African Diaspora. She lives and works in Chicago.

Having traveled hand in hand with Senyah, Jayla and Aunt Yah-Yah, this reviewer eagerly looks forward to the next jaunt through Arizona.
