2022 season - facts and figures

Top earners, top strike rate, best average earnings

Trainer Annike Bye Hansen finished second in the trainers' standings, with 16 winners, 18 runners-up and 8 third place finishers from 75 starters. The stable generated total domestic earnings of NOK. 2,775,249. As many as 56% of all starters saddled by Annike finished in the first three and the stable's win strike rate was an impressive 21.3%, better than any other trainer with more than ten starters during the season. Average earnings per start, NOK 37,003, was also the best return of all trainers with more than ten starters.

The stable's total Scandinavian earnings were close to 5.6 million kroner.

Hard One To Please was the outstanding star, as top rated three-year-old in Scandinavia, with wins in the Swedish Derby, Norwegian Derby and Stockholm Cup International – a unique treble that has never before been achieved. He produced top class form over three vastly different tracks, and on different surfaces.

I Rest My Case became the highest earning horse in Norway in 2022, with NOK 775,849 from eight runs. She just edged out her stable companion Hard One To Please on this list, as his domestic earnings were NOK 725,000 from four runs. Hard One To Please would probably get most votes if we decided to crown a Scandinavian Horse of The Year, and perhaps it's about time to get those Scandinavian stats back up and running? He earned NOK 2,812,764 all told – and he also became the highest earner in Sweden this year. His fellow Väsby Häst flag bearer Youonlyliveonce sits in tenth place on the list of top earners in Norway this year, with NOK. 322,600 from 11 starts that yielded 2 wins and six other top three efforts.
