"Redemption is participatory, not imitative. It is grounded on grace appropriated through faith, not merely on obedience. Spiritual life flows out of union with Christ, not merely imitation of Christ. When the full dimensions of God's gracious provision in Christ are not clearly articulated in the church, faith cannot apprehend them, and the life of the church will suffer distortion and attenuation." (Richard Lovelace, Dynamics of Spiritual Renewal, 73-74.)

"The death of the Lord means also the laying down of the self and the abandonment of all its claims. Throughout His life His will is wholly submitted to the Father's will, and He lives and dies not as pleasing Himself but as losing His will and His whole being in the Father and in mankind. His selfhood is so laid down, that His power and authority center in His humiliation."

(Ramsey, The Gospel and the Church, 23-24.)

"One died for all, therefore all died. To say this is to describe the Church of God. . . But this event, born in eternity and uttering the voice of God from another world, pierces deeply into our order of time, so that the death and resurrection of Christ were known not only as something "without" but also something "within" the disciples who believed. This is the meaning of the church."
