

Tyler Oberlander is a certified athletic trainer from Elm Springs, South Dakota and is based out of Great Plains Health in North Platte, Nebraska. Tyler has provided sports medicine coverage at rodeos since 2013 at the high school, collegiate, amateur, and professional levels. He founded the Great Plains Health Rodeo Sports Medicine Team in 2015. The Great Plains Health Sports Medicine Team provides coverage for 30-40 rodeos yearly focusing on their NIRA collegiate partners in the Great Plains Region, the Nebraska High School Rodeo Association (NHSRA) partners, as well as the local PRCA rodeo committees in Nebraska. Tyler is a volunteer assistant with the Justin Boots Sports Medicine Team since 2015 and provides coverage for the Junior National Finals during the Wrangler National Finals Rodeo. In 2018, Tyler was named Sports Medicine Director of both the Nebraska High School Rodeo Association and the Indian National Finals Rodeo. In 2018, Dr. Steve Williams, M.D., Roper Rodeo Apparel, and Tyler co-created the Roper Rodeo Medicine Team that will provide exclusive medical coverage at the Indian National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas, Nevada. He has provided sports medicine coverage at the INFR since 2017.

Tyler has a bachelors degree in athletic training and a masters degree in sports administration from South Dakota State.

When not working as an athletic trainer, Tyler farms with his family in western South Dakota and is a Firefighter/EMT on the Hershey Volunteer Fire Department in his current residence of Hershey, Nebraska.
