About the Author Donald R. T-Rex was one of the best hunters of all time... all the other dinosaurs ran when they saw him coming. A T-Rex was about 13 feet tall taller than your parents! Some dinosaurs could see in the dark! The Velociraptors were hunters that were about the size of a big turkey. They had long claws and were really fast... in addition to having super night vision powers! One dinosaur learned to be a really good swimmer! She was called the Spinosaurus, and she actually had webbed feet, like a duck. She was such a good hunter, she could even catch sharks!

A Spinosaurus could get pretty big too: almost 60 feet long, which is bigger than T-rex... and longer than your school bus! Do you have any toys that look like this guy? His name is Triceratops. He would grow to be about 30 feet long, weighed about 20 tons, had 3 horns on top of his head and ate plants. Triceratops lived in what is now North America, and the first fossil was found in ! So what happened to all the dinosaurs? Well, you probably know that they disappeared a long, long time ago. Scientists are still working on figuring out exactly why all the dinosaurs disappeared. Some scientists think it was because of volcanoes, or that the dinosaurs wound up running out of food. But for a lot of other animals, it was great news! Lots of creatures, like elephants, cats, and dolphins, were able to find new homes with the dinosaurs gone.

And by the way, there is still one kind of dinosaur left, and you probably see them every day.
