The Victorian House at The Antlers Inn

Built in the early 1900s, this Queen Anne style cottage originally stood in Williamson County, now Round Rock, Texas. It was quite grand for its time with fish scale roofing and its chamfered corners with gingerbread trim. Through its life, the Victorian house was home to a succession of families and students, and served as a movie set in 1973 for “The Texas Chainsaw Massacre.” The house was purchased by The Antlers Inn in 1998. It was then dismantled, moved to Kingsland and completely refurbished. This Victorian house has been home to Grand Central Café since 2012.
