Coastal Kayaking Tours

Welcome to Coastal Kayaking Tours, the favorite choice of people who want to go sea kayaking in Maine. Why? Because of our small groups and our personalized, please-the-guest philosophy, and because we have more experience leading sea kayaking trips than anyone else in New England. Best of all, our kayaking trips are just plain fun! We paddle in ultra-stable tandem kayaks (two people to a boat), so the possibility of tipping over is remote. Over 24 years, we've built our Maine sea kayaking reputation not only on our guides' expertise, but on the small group experience and camaraderie that we provide.

One of the few "sand" (it's actually shell fragments, ground up by the pounding surf over the years) beaches in Acadia region. Keep in mind that if you plan on swimming here, the water temperature rarely gets above 55 degrees - even in mid-August.

Acadia Mountain [Peak]

Acadia Mountain [Trailhead]

DIFFICULT - One of the most popular trails, Acadia Mountain is accessed from a parking area along Route 102 about two miles south of Somesville on the way to Southwest Harbor on the western side of Mount Desert Island. Rangers frequently lead hikes up Acadia as part of their regular summer programs. The trail goes up and over the summit of Acadia Mountain for a one way distance of about 1 and 1/4 miles and a vertical climb of under 700 feet. Return can be via the fire road along the brook between Acadia and St. Sauveur Mountains, or you can keep going up St. Sauveur and continue down to the parking area at it's base along Route 102 about 1/2 mile south of the Acadia Mountain parking area. Views from Acadia are of Somes Sound and the entrance to Southwest Harbor

Bar Harbor Congregational Church

The Bar Harbor Congregational Church was established on May 20, 1883. The congregation met in the Union Meeting House or "White Church" as it was commonly called. The Congregationalists acquired title to the Union Meeting House and built a granite church on the site in 1888-1889. This church burned in 1942 and was replaced on November 7, 1951 by the present structure that was designed to be similar to the old White Church.
