Topic: Finding your Leadership "Sweet Spot"

Summary: As an upcoming leader, it is critical to learn to evaluate who you are in the context of the goals you would like to achieve. Self-Awareness in Leadership is a crucial first step to bringing your best self to the table. This training will focus on identifying your strength, leveraging your skills, and applying your gifts and wisdom to engage in challenging conversations confidently.

Datjaeda is a native of Colorado and has served in management roles for more than eight years. She holds a master's in Human Resource Management and is a SHRM- CP. As a leader in her organizations, she has led many trainings on Leadership Management and Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion. She is a Trained Mediator for Civil issues and a Trained public speaker. Currently, she sits on the Executive Team at Lawndale Christian Health Center of Chicago as the Director of Human Resources.

Datjaeda relocated from Kansas in 2020 to Illinois due to her husband's pastoral assignment to serve in Joliet, Illinois. She has lived in rural and metropolitan communities and feels driven to provide access to sustainable living to those who have often been left behind. Datjaeda is proud to serve in a community and organization that loves God and tries to bring that same love to the work she does every day.
