

Simple texts (including *decodable texts) Simple texts are the simplest form of continuous texts. Simple text includes sentences which are linked to form a cohesive text.

Vocabulary	Language	Structure	Content	Print and layout features
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> names of familiar people, places and things common adjectives (red, big, happy) mainly generic words (cut rather than slice) words used reflect the most common and literal meaning of the words (sound meaning 'noise', not satisfactory) a few interesting words that may be new, but are easy to understand and well supported within the text high-frequency words words that can be used as language play (rhyming words, nonsense words) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> mainly simple, predictable sentences some compound sentences mainly shorter sentences: 3–10 words in length simple past tense or simple present tense simple adverbial phrases of place, time (in the playground, before lunch) a few simple contractions and possessives sentences that are questions simple punctuation marks (full stop, exclamation mark, comma) simple rhythm to language 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> repeated or cumulative patterns simple chronological patterns images support meaning structure is familiar and consistent with typical structure for the type of text (imaginative texts with orientation, complication and resolution) simple cause-and-effect relationships clear signals and transitions to lead the reader through a story, process or set of concepts 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ideas close to children's experience content presented from a single perspective purpose or main idea is explicit and clear from early in the text one or two literal ideas explored simple plot realistic characters, settings and events imaginary characters, events (some containing humour) simply stated facts or information (The library is closed.) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> read in one sitting font mostly large and clear occasional bolding of text some print in speech or thought bubbles digital texts navigable by icons with concise words to describe (print and colour, food, animals) illustrations/images engaging, simple and provide visual support some labels title, author, illustrator listed on front cover and title page

Predictable texts (including *decodable texts)
Vocabulary	Language	Structure	Content	Print and layout features
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • learning area–specific vocabulary • large core of high-frequency words • new or less familiar words scaffolded or supported through context • synonyms for frequently occurring vocabulary • descriptive language including made-up words and words that are represented playfully 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • a range of cohesive devices including pronouns, determiners and temporal connectives • a range of sentences including complex sentences with dependent clauses • simple dialogue with the speaker clearly assigned • some poetic language (onomatopoeia, alliteration rhyme,) • adverbs and prepositional phrases for circumstantial details 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • mainly follows a predictable structure (a persuasive text that opens with a statement of position) • explicit signposting using organisational markers such as paragraphs • some less predictable elements • little demand on a reader to reference forward or backward to comprehend the text • clearly signalled deviations from predictable structures • explicit and clear connections between parts of the text • clear text purpose • clear, logical constructs (cause-and-effect relationships or chronological relationships) • images that enhance the meaning of the text 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • ideas or information clearly explained and described • levels of meaning • some implicit or inferred meaning • some implicit or subtle connections between events or ideas • prior or cultural knowledge may be required to understand content (some understanding of insects to read texts on butterflies) • obvious intertextual references (fairy tales) • low levels of abstraction • simple elements of fantasy (anthropomorphic characters) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • words with varying font sizes, colour and shape, bolding and italics • author dedication • end papers • simple table of contents • digital texts navigable by a combination of text and icons • digital texts that contain multiple pathways to navigate the same ‘page’ • some use of sidebar navigation • images in a variety of forms, labels, captions, maps, photographs, animations • special features that make the text interactive (flaps, buttons, sound)

Moderately complex texts
Vocabulary	Language	Structure	Content	Print and layout features
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • a range of synonyms and antonyms with subtle shades of meaning • technical and discipline-specific words and phrases • words with multiple connotations /meanings • figurative language (similes and metaphors) • idiomatic language ('on thin ice') • words that are used ironically to create humour • occasional words from languages other than English • words that can be understood using root words and knowledge of prefixes and suffixes (unsure, sleepily) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • complex sentences with several subordinate phrases or clauses • extended noun groups (forces of attraction and repulsion) • rhetorical devices (metaphor and hyperbole) • nominalisation • tense varied within the text • complex punctuation • longer passages of detailed description • modal language used to express degree of possibility, probability, obligation and permission • conditional/concessional cohesive devices (although, instead, compared to) • literary devices (sarcasm, irony) • active and passive voice • lexical cohesion across text (herbivore, nocturnal, tree-dwelling) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • organisational markers such as subheadings, chapter headings, sidebars and breadcrumbs • connections between an expanded range of ideas, processes or events are deeper and often implicit or subtle • text structure related to specific disciplines (explanations and evaluative responses) • unique structure (narrative may include concurrent storylines and shifts in time) • multiple reading paths • images supplement and extend meaning of text • intertextuality through adaptation of structure and style 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • extensive descriptive detail • multiple perspectives represented • abstract concepts • topics or ideas presented with significant details or elaboration • main idea or message may need to be inferred • inferred or implicit meanings throughout text (intertextual references) • discipline-specific content (competition among species) • complex characters • multiple characters • images supplement and extend meaning of text 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • texts of variable length (chapter books, long illustrated texts, picture books) • digital texts containing multiple 'pages' and links with multimodal content • texts in a wide variety of forms (web pages, podcasts) • sidebar and breadcrumb navigation • acknowledgements, authors notes, index

Sophisticated texts
Vocabulary	Language	Structure	Content	Print and layout features
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • words that appear in academic disciplines • extensive technical and learning area–specific vocabulary (increment) • substantial use of figurative language, including in non-fiction texts • subtle evaluative language reflecting author viewpoint • vocabulary that requires use of tools such as glossaries • less common affixes (mismanagement) • words requiring sophisticated word-solving strategies • some archaic words or phrases 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • multclause sentences with less common constructs • wide range of declarative, imperative or interrogative sentences • passive voice • dense language with extensive nominalisation • rhetorical patterns (It is accepted that ...) • extensive noun groups (The unexpected reaction to the presence of an acid indicates ...) • modal nouns (assumption) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • structural features subverted • more than one organisational pattern in a text (conceptual, methodological) • several levels of inferred meaning conveyed through highly sophisticated literary devices • author’s position may be disguised or subsumed • includes citations • extensive, intricate, essential integrated graphics, tables, charts, etc., necessary to make meaning of text 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • ideas recontextualised for different times, modes, media and cultures • ideas with several levels of inferred meaning • cultural, historical or literary references • abstract ideas; complex, demanding concepts • theoretical content • complex issues/themes (the problems of society such as racism) • experiences portrayed are remote • connection of ideas may be subtle • sophisticated satire, irony and humour • relationships among characters are complex and often embedded • the purpose of the text is difficult to determine or deliberately disguised • critical thinking required to judge authenticity of informative texts 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • extended texts with unusual text features • collaborative information creation facility allowing the reader to contribute to the text (Wikipedia) • visuals that refine or subvert meaning • complex multimodal features, including an ensemble of print, image, sound and animation • footnotes, endnotes, references, bibliography and index