Angel correctly predicts that Fang will be the first to die in Fang , but Max revives him by injecting his heart with adrenaline. He leaves in the second epilogue because he thinks he is endangering the Flock by distracting Max from her role as leader.

He lets her know numerous times in a letter that he loves her more than anything, and leaves Max a promise ring. He says to her that if they are both still alive in 20 years and the world was still in one piece, he will meet her at the top of the cliff where they met the hawks in The Angel Experiment. When Maya first arrives, he thinks this is a bad idea, making it even harder to be apart from Max, but he soon starts to notice differences and recognizes Maya as a unique individual. He also mentions several times that he has felt attracted to her. Meanwhile, he is jealous of Dylan, who loves Max. He almost accepts him toward the end, saying that "he is trying to be a team player. In Maximum Ride Forever, Fang leaves when the flock decided to split up. He travels to North America, trying to find a girl who posted something on his blog.

Fang soon has to fight erasers and comes across Dylan. Dylan tries to save him, but blacks out. Fang then has to fight off a few erasers. They tear off his left wing before being killed. At the end, Dylan brings Fang back to life by killing himself. We also learn that Max and Fang slept with each other, leading to Max's pregnancy. Iggy is a year-old avian-human hybrid turns 15 in Fang. He is blind but has adjusted well. Like all the others [except for Max, Fang, and Angel] he has not developed gills, and thus cannot breathe underwater. He has really pale skin, strawberry-blonde hair, and light blue eyes. His wings span over fourteen feet and are the same color as his hair, sometimes being considered as white when Angel once compares him to an albatross. He is sarcastic by nature. Iggy is blind because the Whitecoats at the School experimented on his eyes. He can distinguish the Flock members by their voice and foot steps.

He is described as being a good cook. He loves explosives and is a skilled bomb-maker, usually working with the Gasman to destroy a target. He is described as being very smart. In School's Out Forever Iggy learns about his past; his real name is James Griffiths and he was kidnapped by the School when he was four months old. He finds his parents and decides to leave the Flock; However, he soon returns after he learns that his parents were only interested in making money off his story. When the Flock members reunite, they go to Dr. In Angel , Iggy is brainwashed by the Doomsday Group. Max, Dylan, and Angel snap him out of it by forcing him under cold water. He travels with Gazy to America and find survivors there, but then Dylan tracks them down and seemingly kills them both. It is later revealed that he is alive and help take down the Remedy. Nudge is a year-old avian-human hybrid turns 12 in Fang. She is fairly tall with curly brown hair, mocha colored skin, and dark-brown eyes.

She is African American, as Max describes. Nudge is a "motormouth" which Max says repeatedly, the flock calls her the Nudge channel because when she's awake it's all Nudge all the time. Nudge's wings are a tawny brown, sometimes described as cream in coloration. She doesn't like rats. Her real name is Monique; Tiffany-Krystal is her alternate name she likes it better than her real name , and her code is Ngnh.

Nudge can sense old emotions, attract metal to her hand, and hack into almost any computer system. Sensing old emotions has its disadvantages; she feels great distress when touching something which has seen great sadness, as she did at the Vietnam Memorial. Of all the Flock, Nudge is the one most determined to find her biological parents and exhibits a strong desire to be normal, up to the point where she even wishes to get rid of her wings which never happens. She is feminine, loves fashion, and is concerned with her appearance.

Nudge is the most agreeable character, usually allied with Max. She soon finds she misses them and returns. The Gasman is a 8-year-old avian-human hybrid turns 9 in Fang who really likes to fart. Gazy is a kid. His wings resemble a barn owl 's in color, and his wingspan is 10 feet 3. He earned his name because he frequently passes gas. Gazy is Angel's older brother; they are the only members of the Flock who are blood relatives and share the same blue eyes and blond hair Gazy has a cowlick. Gazy has a fear of spiders. Gazy is skilled in mimicry and ventriloquism. He can pass gas at will, giving off a mushroom cloud of green gas.

He, along with Iggy, is skilled at making bombs and has a lot of knowledge about them, as Max states, "You could lock the Gasman in a padded cell with some dental floss and a bowl of Jell-O , and he'd find a way to make something explode. In Max he and Iggy turned the "dumb-bots" into "popcorn" at the Flock's safe house by shooting a lightning rod at a crowd of them. They dub this the "Gaz-Ig-Nart" technique, using it once more against a nuclear submarine when Dumb-bots attacked it. Gazy also knows a lot of information about guns, which is briefly shown in Max when he and the rest of the flock are training at the Navy Base in Hawaii.

In Angel , Gazy is traumatized after nearly allowing Jeb to die after a plane crash. Afterwards, he and Angel join the Doomsday Group as spies for the Flock. At the end of the book, Gazy has seven minutes to disarm an arsenal of bombs and poison gas in Paris and is mostly successful. Angel is the youngest of the flock, a 6-year-old avian-human hybrid has a birthday, her seventh, with the rest of the Flock in Fang , but said that she turned seven in Max. She has curly blonde hair, blue eyes, and white wings that make her look angelic. According to Max, Angel "hit the genetic jackpot", developing a variety of powers throughout the series.

She is telepathic and can influence most people to do her will. Angel can breathe underwater, talk to animals, send animals mental messages, and change her appearance at will, although this power is mentioned only once or twice throughout the series. Angel is also a prophet, she foresees Fang's "death" and the end of the world. Angel owns a small black Scottish Terrier named Total, whom she stole from the Institute for Higher Living, and a small stuffed bear dressed as an angel named Celeste. Although she is somewhat claustrophobic unlike the rest of the Flock, she also likes small cozy spaces. Max describes Angel's bed in their original house as "like a nest—full of stuffed animals, books, most of her clothes".

She wants to replace Max and is more likely to disobey her than the others. Angel disappeared after the explosion in Angel ; Max and the others mistakenly assume she is dead. In Nevermore, she was being held captive by the School. She was eventually rescued by the rest of the flock. In Forever, she ends up leading the mutant army to destroy the Remedy. Angel also is Max's favorite. Angel is around 12 in the last book of the series. They found him there on a little table and Angel wanted to keep him, so the flock adopted him. He has the ability to leap great heights of up to fifteen feet or more and he can talk in English and French, and he could probably talk in more languages if he learned them.

Total seems to know more about recent history than the Flock does; he can identify Brad Pitt in Madame Tussauds , and opines that there were two shooters in the JFK assassination. He is refined, expressing disgust when Max refuses to stop and enjoy the sights of Paris. Total is devoted to Angel at first, gravitating towards Max as the series progresses. Angel never leaves Total behind; in the second book, the Flock returned to Anne's house for Total, although it was swarming with Erasers. In the fourth book, Total falls in love with a white Malamute named Akila, who nearly dies in a hurricane. When he discovers she survived he licks her face, which she enjoys. However, Akila is a normal dog; she cannot understand Total when he speaks to her in English or French.

Max talks to Total about this; Total says he can talk to Akila in his "native language" dog language. Total and Akila marry at the end of Fang. He reappears as a minor character in Angel, staying with Dr. Martinez and Ella while Akila visits her family after their honeymoon. His small black wings, developed in The Final Warning, have grown to their full size, and he can fly without difficulty. She is also almost 5 years old. Like her parents, she is a human-avian hybrid with wings. She is seen to be agile and smart, although exactly what abilities she inherited from her parents are currently unknown. Phoenix has brown eyes like Max and raven black hair and wings like Fang. Max says that although her name is Phoenix, she plans on giving her the ability to choose her own name like she did.

She is only briefly spoken of in the last book of the series as she begins her first flying lessons with her family. The book is free on BookFrom. Net not a scam. He is the mentor and teacher of the Flock, after helping the Flock escape, he leaves, supposedly dead. When Angel is captured, the Flock sees him again, but as a whitecoat. Throughout the next few books, he is seen as one of the enemy whitecoats; at the end Saving the World and other Extreme Sports, it becomes clear that Jeb is working as a sort of double agent for the Flock, though Max and her gang still see him as untrustworthy. He is the father of Ari, who was turned into an Eraser when his father took the Flock from the School. Relations between the two become strained after this episode. However, Jeb still demonstrates that although he may not be the best of fathers, he still loves his son.

Also at the end of the third book, it is revealed that Jeb is Max's father: this explains how after Max killed Ari in the first book, Jeb called out, "You killed your own brother! He and Max both had dirty blond hair as well as Ari, but Jeb, unlike Max, has blue eyes. The School made him hunt the Flock. He is the most wolf-like of the Erasers—always in a partially morphed state, he was once mistaken for Wolverine by a young boy at Disney World. Ari is illiterate; he, like Max, hears a Voice in his head too. As the son of Jeb Batchelder, he is Max's half-brother. When he was three years old his father disappeared with the Flock, leaving Ari in the care of the School's genetic scientists. His features before the transformation were dirty blond hair and blue eyes. Despite his desire for Max's death, Ari admires her. He is willing to do anything to kill the entire group, especially Fang. The School saves him by realigning his spine and grafts a pair of wings onto his back.
