

Kali Alford

Consultant

Kali is an expert facilitator, instructional designer, and life-long learner & educator. With 12 years of experience he has designed learning workshops for school districts across the country and developed professional learning events in partnership with companies such as Microsoft and Verizon.

Kali's previous experience includes working in the Distance Learning Office of Kennesaw State University, assisting professors in converting their traditional courses into online formats. He eventually he transitioned to the university's iTeach Team which is responsible for supporting Metro Atlanta school districts plan and implement steps to offer online and blended instruction for all students.

Kali received Master's and Specialist degrees in Instructional Technology from Kennesaw State University and earned his Bachelors of Arts in History from Columbus State University.

He currently lives in Atlanta, Georgia with his wife Jennifer and their dog/ roommate Langston. In his free time he enjoys woodworking, cooking, and road trips.