

PADDLEBOAT CRUISE INFORMATION

HISTORY: In the late 1600s French fur traders canoed their way up the St. Croix River Valley to barter trinkets with the Ojibwe and Dakota Indian tribes in exchange for animal pelts. Such arduous travel remained until 1838, around the same time the Minnesota logging boom began, when the first river boat found its way to this new part of the world. By the mid 1800s nearly 400 stern-wheelers were transporting immigrants, early settlers, and commercial goods to many Minnesota and Wisconsin river towns. However, during the second half of the 19th century, depleted forests, expanding farm life, the popularity of train service, and better roads caused a rapid demise of steamboat transportation. As part of the 2023 ATCA Floating Specialty weekend of events, the Twin Cities Airedale Terrier Club would like to invite you to relive those historic times by taking a Friday night river cruise on the stern-wheeler replica, the Andiamo, one of six steamboats operating from a downtown Stillwater dock. The evening promises to provide picturesque river valley scenery, a tasty supper buffet, and engaging “Airedale talk” with old and new friends. You too can become a “river rat” . . . at least for one night!
