½ cup + 3 tbsp buttermilk
1 ½ cup all-purpose flour
½ tsp baking soda
1 tsp baking powder
½ tsp ground cinnamon
¼ tsp ground ginger

DIRECTIONS:

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Butter an 8 or 9-inch round cake pan VERY well. Cut a circle of parchment big enough to fit in the bottom of the pan. Nestle the paper in the pan and then butter the parchment paper. Add flour to the pan. Evenly coat the butter in flour, shaking out any excess flour.
2. Add seven tablespoons of the softened butter to a large sauté pan. Heat to medium-high. Swirl the pan until the butter starts to brown on the edges. Continue to swirl the pan until the butter turns a deep golden brown and smells nutty. Remove from the heat. Use a wooden spoon or spatula to get all the brown bits off of the bottom of the pan. Transfer all but two tablespoons of the butter to a small bowl. Transfer the bowl of melted brown butter to the freezer. Stir every three or four minutes until the butter has solidified again, and is in a softened state. (You want it to be the same texture as the softened butter, so make sure you don't freeze it until it's hard. Stirring every few minutes is key!)
3. While the butter solidifies, add brown sugar to the two tablespoons of brown butter in the sauté pan. Turn the heat on medium and cook until the brown sugar has melted. Add pears and toss in the sauce. Cook pears 2-3 minutes until slightly softened. Turn the heat off. Season with a pinch of salt. Set aside.
4. Add flour, baking soda, baking powder, salt, ginger, and cinnamon to a medium bowl. Whisk to combine. Set aside.
5. Once the butter has come to a softened state, add it, along with the remaining 4 tablespoons softened butter and sugar to the bottom of a stand mixer. Beat on a medium speed until it's light and fluffy, about 2-3 minutes. Reduce the speed to low and add eggs, one at a time, until each is incorporated. Add vanilla, mix until combined.
6. Add 1/3 of the flour mixture to the butter and sugar. Mix on low just until the flour has been combined. Add half the buttermilk. Again mix on low, just until the buttermilk is combined. Add another 1/3 of the flour, and mix on low just until combined. Pour in the remaining buttermilk and mix until combined. Finally, add the remaining 1/3 of the flour and mix on low just until combined.
7. Arrange the pears in the prepared pan. Pour any remaining caramel sauce on top. Working carefully, dollop the batter over the pear mixture and spread the batter evenly over the pears, making sure to not move the pears. Bake for 25-30 minutes or until a wooden skewer or toothpick comes out with just a few crumbs attached.
8. Let the cake rest for 1 minute. Use a knife to loosen all the edges. Place a large plate or platter on top of the pan. Flip and use a knife or spoon to tap the top so the cake releases. Remove the pan. Gently remove parchment paper. Cut into wedges. Sprinkle with powdered sugar.
9. *Be sure to butter and flour the cake pan VERY well or it will stick! *If any of the pears do stick, just peel them off the pan and arrange them on the cake. Dust with powdered sugar.

If the stem is solid, peel the leaves back and roll the stem between your fingers. If it rolls easily between your fingers, it's a round stem and is most likely a rush. - A framed spatial design is a three-dimensional spatial design, staged in a frame-type structure. The attaching wires, string, or monofilament line should be as invisible as possible. The design embodies lightness and airiness and there is usually an unconventional use of plant material. There is no actual movement; movement is implied.
- Material should be placed to provide a visual penetration of the framed volume of space for depth. Materials cannot touch the frame. Avoid creating a design that "just hangs there"; how well the volume of space actively contributes to the creativity of the design. The frames can be no larger than 24" wide by 36" high

- Participants that sign up for the Framed Spatial Design must exhibit or secure someone else to enter in their place. Backboards will be provided, contact show chair if wanted before fair.
