

In Memory of Betty K. Anderson. . . the Love Lives On

by Lee Anderson

When Dad died 25 years ago I watched Mom grieve and begin a new life. Now it is my time to begin life without her; and be sustained by my faith, family, and friends.

I have so many special memories of Mom. One that was life changing for me was her interest, support and participation in saving Riverview Cemetery from neglect and abandonment. My dad, as well as maternal and paternal grandparents—and other relatives on the ‘family tree’—had been laid to rest at this cemetery. For 5 years Mom and I collected memories, stories, and photos from people across the country whose relatives were at Riverview. Mom then supported the publication of my book Riverview Cemetery – Reading the Stones –

a Collection of Memories from the First State. She held the first book signing event in her backyard in Fairfax. In 2009, Friends of Historic Riverview Cemetery became a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. Mom was an active volunteer and when she was no longer physically able to participate, her encouragement and interest remained constant.

It was with heartfelt gratitude that I dedicated my book to my parents, Tom and Betty Anderson. The dedication reads: ‘You gave me life, filled my life with loving kindness, and introduced me to the everlasting love of God. Thank you for the stories. Thank you for the memories. Thank you for everything. I will remember you always with love and admiration.’

On January 11th, 2023 I was blessed to be at Mom’s bedside as she took her final breath. I will always remember this sacred moment. I am blessed to have shared life and death with Mom. I believe...the love lives on!

GO TAKE A WALK!

by Shirley Duffy

This may seem like the wrong kind of weather to be outside, but scientific evidence shows that walking in a “natural setting” improves our mental health.

Many of us dislike the dark, cold days of winter. Some of us even have the diagnosis of “Seasonal Affective Disorder,” also known as SAD. But even without that diagnosis, we can feel the weight of shortened daylight hours, gray skies, and damp, cold days. However, we can help ourselves conquer Old Man Winter by meeting him head-on.

Bundle up and head outdoors! Dress warmly in layers, wear sturdy, water-resistant footwear, and don’t forget your hat and gloves. Take a companion with you to enjoy the experience. Where should you go? How about a winter stroll through Historic Riverview Cemetery? What will you see? Of course, you will see the ordinary things that we see in cemeteries, but for your winter walk, I suggest you look up. Look around. Engage with nature! One of the beauties of winter is that many of our trees have lost their leaves; winter lets us take notice of trees, such as their size, shape, bark, buds, or seed structures.

Here are a few highlights from three trees of the 32 species in the southeast part of the cemetery:

Images 1-4 show our fantastic Saucer Magnolia near Market Street and the Visitor Center. Once you find this tree, notice (1) how wide and spreading it is. Circle the trunk (2) to find the unusual “porthole” that developed when two parts of the trunk grew together. Notice that the bark (3) is primarily smooth and gray. The promise of spring (4) is seen in the large, fuzzy buds that will become leaves or large, fragrant, beautiful pink flowers.

A little further into the southeast part of the cemetery, you will see (5) a Tulip Poplar tree. Notice that the tall cone shape is unlike the magnolia, even though they are "cousins." Also, the rougher bark on the trunk (6) and interesting seed pods (7) are unlike the Magnolia, but the flower characteristics are similar. Tulip Poplars are known for their straight, unbranching trunks and are a common native tree in forests near Wilmington.

At the far end of the southeast cemetery is a grand White Ash tree (8). Notice the height and width of the tree compared to the parked car. The trunk is very rough with deep furrows (9) and so vast that I cannot completely hug it! The cemetery trees bring me joy. I hope they do the same for you this winter.
